<解答例 1>

Smartphone addiction is a state of mind people fall into when they use a smartphone for a long time every day until they lose their self-control. Such people feel uneasy or get irritated if they are away from their phone.

<解答例 2>

Smartphone addiction is an unhealthy dependence on smartphones and can interfere with work or relationships. Individuals with smartphone addiction have their smartphone with them all the time and check it hundreds of times a day, even when it has negative consequences in their life.

(2)

<解答例 1>

I think the researchers found various negative health effects caused by smartphones on present-day students in Japan. Some students may have become mentally unstable due to the stress of having to constantly connect with friends via smartphone, while others may complain of poor eyesight or be unable to concentrate on their studies, suffering from a decline in academic performance.

<解答例 2>

The researchers probably found out through the questionnaire that students who use a smartphone for long periods every day are likely to suffer from poor vision or dry eye. They may also have found that those who constantly use a smartphone cannot get enough sleep at night, with the result that they lose concentration during the day and their performance gets worse.
