Banksy's image shows a government worker erasing the famous Lascaux cave paintings. This would never happen in real life. These paintings are an important World Heritage Site. Banksy is suggesting that modern street art is as important a part of our culture as these prehistoric paintings were to that of their creators. I disagree with this idea. Most modern street art is trivial and antisocial. Law-abiding citizens want it to be removed. By contrast, the Lascaux cave paintings had profound spiritual meaning for the society in which they were made.
